

Abstract: Group Presentation
Presentation Type: Poster Symposium

Naidenova L., The Institute of Reflective Investigation and Specialisation, Kyiv, Ukraine

Reflective potential of the professional community in the professional's development

Professionalism is one of key values determined a direction of progressive transformation of a post - soviet society.

Such feature of modern society as the mobility and flexibility of social and professional structures requires from the individual subject an ability to separate in his mind the concrete connections and attitudes of different groups on the basis of moral readiness for the highest responsibility for the own life. This especial clearness of intellectual abilities of the responsible subject is subject's reflective ability.

We describe such subject's property as reflectivity: a) qualitatively - from what components it consists; b) quantitatively - how many and what components are represented in it's structure; c) as a potential - whole with different levels of intensity. The reflective potential can be determined in relation to the subject of any level (individual, group, social).

The professional community (association) is played the an important role in professional's coming into being. The professional community is the carrier of the example of the professional activity for the individual. It is the subject of political activity and at the same time the context for the individual subject's coming into being. There is a reflective potential of professional community.

The becoming of the professional is a process of transition from appropriation of a profession's common potential to development this cumulative potential by the individual. The technology for organization of a medium of professional contact through designing of significant events ensuring intersection and enrichment of a subjects' reflective potential is offered.